

Project management two years on...

Vertical 'celebrates' the second anniversary of its online project management system. Introduced in 2009 as a way to help staff and clients managed current project goals and developments, and exchange large files (up to 100 Mb) from anywhere in the world, the system has proven to be irreplaceable.

Basecamp is a part of Vertical's flexible toolkit. Clients are in control and in touch, and Vertical can track project segments to make sure deliverables are on-time, on-budget and to the brief.

"Although we felt certain that this system would deliver what it promised, you never know with these things. However two years down the line, we're more than happy with the way Basecamp works", said Paul Barlow.